Kumusta

MAMFMA (Modern Arnis Mano-Mano Filipino Martial Arts) which is one of the FMA Digest Organizations of the year for 2009 was chosen for its interactions with schools, communities and the less fortunate in the promotion of the Filipino martial arts.

This is just one of the reasons, always working with the youth and building the young practitioners for the future.

Linggo ng Wika held with various activities, like coming to school in native costumes, staging plays in Tagalog/Filipino, or conducting classes entirely in Tagalog/Filipino is a mark of retaining the heritage of the country and ensuring that the youth continue to learn and remember their countries history.

One must remember that what a parent, a society, and a country teaches to the youth is what the future will bring. The youth must always be aware and informed of their past, and the present to develop the future.

Maraming Salamat Po

What is Buwan ng Wika or the definition of Buwan ng Wika?

It used to be just called Linggo ng Wika (week of the (Philippine) language), and it fell on the week around August 19, the birthday of Manuel L. Quezon, the president of the Philippine Commonwealth republic who pushed for the institutionalization of Tagalog as the country's national language. At that time most educated people regarded English fluency as the mark of refinement and sophistication, and schooling and affairs of government were conducted in English, while anyone who spoke only Philippine languages were regarded as country bumpkins. Thus Linggo ng Wika was held to promote the use of the national language (which, in deference to other major linguistic groups, specifically the Cebuanos, was renamed "Filipino," although many linguists refuse to accept this term).

In school, Linggo ng Wika would be held with various activities, like coming to school in native costumes, staging plays in Tagalog/Filipino, or conducting classes entirely in Tagalog/Filipino. President Ramos expanded it from a week into a month (August), although today there's really no more need to promote its use, as it is English fluency that is on the decline among Filipinos.
